

Arts Education

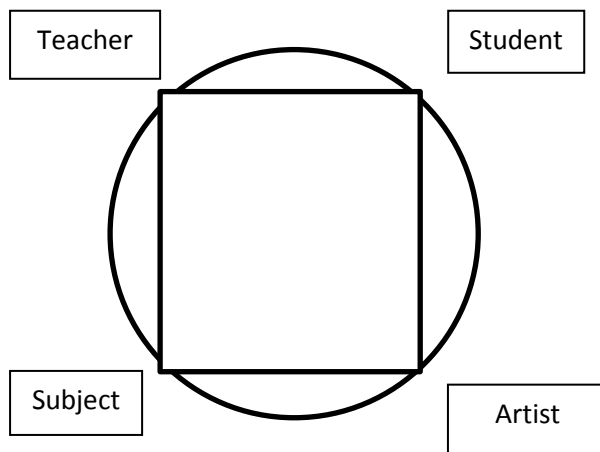

Arts Education in a didactical context

Teaching is normally defined as a relation between 3 factors:

These factors are the elements in the so-called didactical triangle.

In Arts Education the didactical thinking is expanded with introduction of the artist or the work of art, coming to play an important role in education. This can be illustrated by the below model where the artist is integrated and related to all the other parts.

Working with Arts Education implies an artistic approach where art is a part of the subject to be taught, and a factor influencing the learning process itself.

Why UNESCO focus on Arts Education

UNESCO is an abbreviation of United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. Arts Education is connected to both the educational and cultural dimension and was initiated at the World Conference on Arts Education' in 2006 in Lisbon (Portugal) and followed by another conference in 2010 in Seoul (Corea).
